St Michael's Church of England High School Curriculum Plan

English

The Aims of the English National Curriculum

The overarching aim for English in the national curriculum is to promote high standards of language and literacy by equipping pupils with a strong command of the spoken and written word, and to develop their love of literature through widespread reading for enjoyment. The national curriculum for English aims to ensure that all pupils:

- read easily, fluently and with good understanding
- > develop the habit of reading widely and often, for both pleasure and information
- > acquire a wide vocabulary, an understanding of grammar and knowledge of linguistic conventions for reading, writing and spoken language
- appreciate our rich and varied literary heritage
- write clearly, accurately and coherently, adapting their language and style in and for a range of contexts, purposes and audiences
- > use discussion in order to learn; they should be able to elaborate and explain clearly their understanding and ideas
- > are competent in the arts of speaking and listening, making formal presentations, demonstrating to others and participating in debate.

English Intent Statement

Intent

The English curriculum is designed to reflect our school values and beliefs as set out in the school's vision statement, 'our students will flourish spiritually, morally and academically'.

Our curriculum is a knowledge based curriculum that demonstrates our high aspirations for pupils. It has been designed to be fully inclusive to enable all our students to achieve excellence. We have drawn upon concepts and vocabulary from KS4 and KS5 when designing the KS3 and KS4 curriculum to ensure that our pupils are well equipped for the next stage. We have designed an ambitiously academic English language and literature curriculum; one that is knowledge-rich and which introduces students to ideas and concepts beyond the National Curriculum and prescribed examination specifications.

Our curriculum is sequenced in a way that allows students at KS3 to develop the necessary skills for KS4 whilst also fostering a love for English reading and writing and our pupils are taught by knowledgeable and enthusiastic teachers who are experts in the discipline. Different reading and writing skills are developed in year 7 and revisited each year in varied ways to consolidate and develop upon pupils' starting points. The length of time devoted to different topics and skills varies in order that each area of study is allotted enough time for skills to be embedded and texts to be studied in depth.

We believe that all pupils, regardless of ability, can develop strong literacy skills and the curriculum is designed to challenge all pupils whilst remaining accessible for those who have historically demonstrated weak levels of literacy. All pupils work towards the same assessment each half term, regardless of their starting points.

Reading is prioritised with KS3 lessons starting with a portion of the lesson devoted to independent reading. We have invested in the Renaissance Accelerated Reading scheme which allows students to take independent tests on the texts that they have been reading and offers teachers an additional assessment tool to ensure that pupils are making rapid progress in terms of their reading.

Throughout KS3 and KS4 we try to ensure that pupils are exposed to a wide range of poetry, drama and prose texts in order that they might complete their time at St Michael's with an understanding of the approaches and the literary style of a wide variety of writers. Our aim is that all pupils regardless of ability or background, leave St Michael's not only well qualified but as confident individuals and responsible citizens who can make a positive contribution to any part of society and who can live rewarding and fulfilling lives.

Our curriculum is underpinned by Big Ideas which are revisited throughout our chronological studies:

- The concept of narrative
- Exploring the writer's craft
- The impact of Shakespeare
- Poetry writing
- Non-fiction writing and the art of rhetoric
- Texts and the links to their contexts

Students begin Year 7 with an introduction to non-fiction writing within the genre of travel writing which links nicely to their next area of study which is poetry around the world. We then move onto a more modern novel 'Refugee Boy' and continue to use poetry to draw comparisons in terms of the writer's voice across different genres; we explore thematic links across poetry and prose. The final area of study is Shakespeare and we end the year with Midsummer Night's Dream continuing to reinforce the big ideas of writer's craft and texts and their contexts to develop the ideas that have been explored throughout the year. During year 7 we impress upon students the importance of understanding place and time when scrutinising a text.

Year 8 pupils have the opportunity to explore 19th Century prose through Oliver Twist enjoying the text whilst appreciating the writer's craft. They are also offered a chance to explore real life villains through non-fiction reading and writing. The texts in year 8 are linked by the overarching theme of heroism and villainy and build upon this thematic link as they delve into the genre of autobiography. During this module they are provided with opportunities to write creatively about their own stories preparing them for future modules at KS4 where they produce their own narratives. The final module of year 8 is called Tales of the Unexpected, pupils explore the parabolic nature of literature and are again reminded of the importance of the link between texts and their contexts. They are encouraged to explore the art of the short story which prepares them well for narrative writing at KS4.

Year 9 students begin the year with a play Blood Brothers which we find resonates with our pupils as it explores a context that they can relate to. Pupils not only revisit the differences between prose and drama but they continue to analyse the writer's craft and draw links between the text and the context that it depicts. Similarly to how we approach Refugee Boy in year 7, we draw links between Blood Brothers and social justice poetry to make thematic links between drama and poetry. Pupils then explore a modern novel Boys Don't Cry which allows them to explore choices that are again more relevant to their own contexts at is examines the choices a young teenage boy is faced with. This builds nicely to the study of Romeo and Juliet which again deals with the devastating consequences of their choices. Throughout the study of these texts we continue to delve into the writer's craft and the link between the text and the context in which it is set. The exploration of a Shakespearian tragedy prepares students well for the study of Macbeth at KS4.

Year 10 pupils begin with the study of the Eduqas English literature course beginning with A Christmas Carol. Pupils have already been exposed to Charles Dickens work in year 8 and this builds on the skills that they have acquired in previous modules such as exploring themes of social justice, making links between texts and their contexts and acknowledging and exploring the writer's craft. The theme of social just is developed through the next area of study An Inspector Calls. Pupils are able to draw from what they learnt about the conventions of drama in year 9 and identify themes of social justice that have been prevalent in many of the texts that they have explored previously. From this pupils move on to the study of Macbeth. Having studied Shakespearian texts twice previously they are not only familiar with Shakespearian texts but also the concept of a Shakespearian tragedy. During this year they develop an understanding of the requirements for the English literature GCSE exam and continue to hone their essay writing skills. In the final half term pupils begin component 3 of their GCSE English course by completing their speaking and listening assessments on a topic of their choice.

Year 11 study GCSE Eduqas English language course and begin by focusing on narrative reading and writing. For this module they draw upon the skills that they have learnt during their study of novels and short stories in year 7, 8 and 9. They are taught to build up pace in responding the reading questions and are encouraged to use a variety of stimulus to write stories from different genres.

Year 12 and 13 study the A Level AQA English Literature course specification B. Again the threads of texts and their contexts, wrtier's craft, the study of poetry, prose and drama have enabled students to develop the necessary skills to study at this level.
